GENERAL METHOD OF EVALUATION

1. The site representatives made a brief presentation of the city, the competition site and the competition brief. The site representative presented each submitted proposal briefly, and focused on technical aspects without evaluating the projects.
2. The jury and site representatives independently selected which projects they wanted to bring up to further discussion.
3. Discussion, comparison, and preselection of proposals. Only the jury had a vote, but the site representatives could participate in the discussions.

KNOWLEDGE OF THE PROJECTS / CRITERIA AND WAY TO PRESELECT

The jury members had access to all of the projects before the meetings, and all projects were exhibited site per site in the room of the jury discussions.

In general, the jury has been looking at the potential for adaptability of the proposals. There has been no evident solution for any of the sites, and the proposals need to be developed.

The jury has pre-selected the best projects before a definitive selection. The jury has been consensual in their decision, and no voting has been required.

Borås

The connection to the city centre and the relation to existing buildings, the water and green structures are key elements for this site. The preselected projects show similar approaches but vary in density and manner to organize the blocks. The preselected projects capture something from the soul of Borås as a city.

4 preselected projects

Enköping

The competition site is framed by areas of four different characters, which needs to be considered in the proposals. The development of the area by the railway is key for the project. The preselected projects are showing different approaches on how to connect the competition site, by a linear axis or with nature and water.

3 preselected projects

Halmstad

Technically challenging competition site. The proposals need to find a solution on how to connect the station to the rest of the city as well as creating an efficient hub for the traveller. Flows of traffic for both pedestrians and bicycles need to be considered. There is also a need to finance the project by adding areas for exploitation. These areas should strengthen the urban character of the site as well as adding relevant content.

3 preselected projects

Helsingborg

The jury has focused on the proposed content and modifications of Magasin 405 and have preselected projects that justify the aim not to demolish the building. If the building is modified too much, it won't be justified to keep it. It is important to keep the big interior room and modify it slightly for permanent use.

5 preselected projects

Täby

The brief for Täby has a concrete program and precise numbers for exploitation. The submitted proposals give concrete answers to the question posed. The preselected projects show different approaches. One shows a garden city with lower exploitation number, and the others are different variations of grid plan structures. Localisation of different functions, connections to surrounding areas, and character of the green areas are key to the projects.

4 preselected projects

Uddevalla

For the site in Uddevalla the jury has chosen three types of solutions that are dealing with the site in different ways. The jury has been looking at how well the proposals are adapted to the existing topography, how they relate to the city centre, and how they connect the divided areas within the competition site.

3 preselected projects

Visby

The project site relates to the medieval city within the wall and the modernistic city planning outside the wall, and the proposals need to relate to both. The jury has preselected three similar proposals that show variations on the aspects of scale, directions, urban spaces and typology. The answer to the Productive City is in general by adding elements of cultivation.

GENERAL METHOD OF EVALUATION

1. The Site representatives gave a report from the Forum in Innsbruck and the working groups they have participated in.
2. The Jury members presented the preselected projects of which they have made a profound reading.
3. The Site representatives made technical comments to the presented projects.
4. Question raised if any of the eliminated projects should be brought to the discussion again.
5. General discussion around the projects.
6. The jury confer alone and give their motivations for the winner, runner-up and special mention.

CRITERIA AND WAY TO SELECT

The goal for the jury discussions was for the jury to arrive at a consensual decision by discussion, but in those cases needed, the jury has voted. The jury has gradually eliminated projects in order to arrive to the final selection.

By the end of the last session the jury has exhibited, compared and had a global discussion around the winners, and the final evaluation was executed.

FINAL EVALUATION

The motivation of the jury will be made public at the prize ceremony in Stockholm 16/1 2020.
